CURRENT CONCERNS ABOUT THE LANGUAGE TEACHING-RESEARCH NEXUS

SEMINAR

The seminar will address the relationship between language teaching and research, particularly from the perspective of postgraduate studies in English language teaching.

Does engaging in reading, discussions, writing and research truly influence teaching practices, or does it primarily serve to justify actions and “talk the talk”? Are language teachers too pressed for time or simply disinterested in engaging with academic discourse? Is theoretical knowledge essential for language teachers, and how can embracing language teaching research benefit them?

These questions and more will be explored, delving into how postgraduate studies can effectively support the integration of language teaching and research.
